Monthly report as of March 31, 2024

The US economy continued to perform stronger than expected. Inflation is on its way down, but at a slower pace than forecast. Despite upward revised US growth, the US Federal Reserve (the Fed) signalled three 25 basis point interest rate cuts during the year. This is in line with market expectations. The fact that the Fed is sticking to its interest rate cuts contributed to the fall in Treasury yields in March. There was a high level of activity in the 'high yield' market with a large number of bond issuances. Many companies initiated the process of refinancing bonds maturing in the upcoming year. Three debt-laden major issuers, Intrum, Altice France, and Ardagh indicated intentions that were interpreted as preparations for some manner of debt restructuring. Despite this turmoil, the strong overall demand in the credit market continued.

The fund rose by almost one per cent during the month, which was slightly better than its benchmark. Falling government yields and a strong credit market contributed to the increase in fund value. Both security and sector selection explain the positive development against the benchmark. Our underweight in the telecoms sector in general, and Altice France in particular, were the single largest contributors. Our positioning in Intrum is in line with the benchmark and did not affect the relative performance.

Our main scenario is that interest rate cuts are on the way and that this will provide support to the credit market. The fact that the US Federal Reserve continues to signal interest rate cuts is therefore positive, but the strong US economy has still increased uncertainty. Overall, the credit quality of companies is good, but the most heavily indebted companies are dependent on interest rates falling. The weak growth in important countries, such as Germany and China, is another negative factor. However, as long as the interest rate cut forecast remains unchanged, we find it difficult to see what would turn the credit market in a negative direction.
